INDIA

WELCOME TO CHENNAI

The STAI & SISSTA are holding the 9th Joint Convention from 19th - 21st of August 2010 alongwith Sugar Expo 2010 at Chennai, Tamil Nadu. The Joint Convention is likely to be attended by around 1500 - 1600 delegates from India & abroad.

Chennai - Popularly regarded as the "Gateway to the South". It is the gracious capital city of Tamil Nadu, the fourth largest metropolis in India. Located on a 17km stretch of the Coramandel coast, the city is trisected by the waterways of Cooum and Adyar and the Buckingham Canal. Chennai presents culture that is distinctly different from that of northern India. Music, dance and all other art forms of the South are cherished and nurtured in this city which, though industrialized, continues to be traditional and conventional in many ways.

CURRENT GLOBAL SUGAR SCENARIO

The global sugar prices more than doubled in 2009 due to alarming shortfall in world's two largest sugar producing countries against ever rising demand for the commodity. This came on top of the considerable reduction in sugar inventories across the globe following last year's unprecedented fall in global sugar production.

Attracted by the healthy sugarcane prices last year, the cane producers have started planting more crops in the hope of cashing in on the bull run. According to initial reports the sugarcane area under cultivation in India is set to increase in 2010-11. The Brazilian Sugarcane Industry is forecasting that sugarcane output may rise 10% this season to more than 580 MT. The combined sugar output by the two giants sugar producing countries may put the brakes on the spiraling sugar prices in 2010-11.

Like any other commodity, sugar industry is too cyclical. To mitigate sole dependence on seasonal sugarcane supply and to be self reliant, STAI has been advocating adopting alternate technologies to produce sugar through raw & refined processes, generate additional revenues through use of viable & efficient technologies for production of ethanol & other bio-fuels. We hope that the above issues would be dwelled during the Convention.

The STAI & SISSTA will be happy to extend a warm welcome to participants across all sectors of industry both from India and abroad to join the convention and share knowledge on various current topics of concern to the world sugar industry. The Joint Convention will unquestionably be a major event and business platform for all professionals involved in the sugar industry and provide unrivalled overview of all new happenings in the sugar sector. It shall provide opportunity to update on trends, products, technical developments and research. Besides, the convention also promises to offer a platform for networking, exploring business opportunities and tie-ups.

During the convention the recent research trends in sugar alcohol, power will be presented by various scientists, technologists, agronomists. The plenary session will be held on 20th August in which presentation will be made by experts on the following:-

1. Cane
    a. Issues of increasing farmers productivity through intercropping.
    b. Mechanization of cane harvesting
2. Processing
    a. Process technology change

3. Engineering / Power / Boiler
   a. Automation in sugar industry with data acquisition
4. By-products
   a. Ethanol from cellulose
5. Miscellaneous
   a. IT intervention in cane management systems
   b. Reports - Evaluation on the working of FFC Technology under STAI R & D initiative

A new session on factory management will be started from this convention. Joint convention will also offer wide range of paper on subtropical and tropical India and experience of sugar, ethanol, cogen will be shared among delegates.
